After nearly three years since taking responsibility for the quality management of all auditors at NOSA, Graham Kings has faced the challenges of a company that has emerged from an earlier liquidation and rapidly re-established credibility in the HSE environment.

Graham has some amusing recollections of challenges that are periodically faced and addressed together with insight into the obstacles and interventions that are required to develop the potential of Auditors.

NOSA has developed various systems to ensure the quality of service delivery in the auditing division of the company that will briefly be outlined during the presentation followed by advice to Auditors gained from reviewing hundreds of audit reports for several years.
