1. ISO 19011:2018 TRANSITION

Management systems are the cradle of norm-based audits. The main requirements are audited by ISO management system standards 9001, 14001, 45001, 22000 or combinations thereof. However, companies also have the auditing potential to support and control technical or organisational developments outside a normative perspective. In both cases, ISO 19011: 2018 is a good guide and basis for the auditing. In this workshop, you will learn sound, strategic audit practice to analyse, review or improve your business organisation.

Your benefit:

You professionalise the audit process and improve its performance. You will learn supportive approaches to align audits strategically, risk-based, process-oriented and performance-oriented. You use the audit method, both in a reactive and proactive way, in the interests of your company.

2. ISO 17021-1:2015

The workshop aims at the exchange of (lead) assessors' experiences as regards application, interpretation and manner of assessing the new requirements of ISO/IEC 17021-1:2015 Conformity assessment - Requirements for bodies providing audit and certification of management systems - Part 1: Requirements, and accompanying parts (technical specifications) of the standard (parts 2-10) and level 3, 4 and 5 standards.

The following topics will be covered during the workshop:

- History of ISO/IEC 17021 and novelties introduced by ISO/IEC 17021-1
- ISO/IEC 17021-2/ISO/IEC 17021-3 and IAF mandatory document (IAF MD10)
- ISO/TS 17023:2013 and IAF mandatory documents (IAF MD1, IAF MD5, IAF MD11) - audit duration

Your benefit:

Participants will learn the details of the accreditation process and how to prepare for a management system certification body assessment.

Who should attend:

Internal and external auditors, audit program managers, system officers, quality managers, and other professionals and executives who develop management systems.

3. Debate on the 3rd party auditing vs internal auditing, the value adds and the negatives of both.
